LOCAL SEWAGE PROCESS IS APPROVED

CALCAR PLANT IS FAVORED BY STATE BOARD

Extensive Study of Two Months Ends With Favorable Decision

PROCESS IS LAUDED

Elimination of Odor Praised by Healther

After an extensive test of two months at the local disposal plant, the State Department of Health has approved the process of sewage treatment of the Calcar Products Corporation, a corporation controlled by local men and capital. The test included the half-hourly sampling of the raw sewage and the plant effluent on which every chemical analysis known to sewage treatment was conducted.

The process is one of chemical precipitation and while some parts of the process have been employed in European countries and some cities here for a good many years, the main constituent or ingredient of the treatment is new and in general the process is entirely diffcrent than that which is and has been accepted as the general practice and which is known as the biological process.

It is claimed for the process that it will not only handle city sewage but industrial wastes as well and with the entrance into our sewers today of industrial waste, oil washings from the streets and other foreign substances other than purely domestic sewage, the process should be able to fill a big need in the disposal field.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 26—The toll of dead in the Chinese flood disaster was increased by at least 3,200 by the typhoon which struck the devastated Hankow area, a check-up indicated today.

AID IS RUSHED TO KNISELY IN BRIBE PROBE

Tax Commission Expresses Confidence in Lorbach Charges

DENIES ACCUSATION

Man Who Introduced Pair Enters Case

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 26.—Help was rushed from two directions today to Clyde J. Knisely, state tax commission real estate examiner, defending him against charges of offering Senator David P. Lorbach, Cincinnati Democrat, a bribe of $250,000 if he would drop his investigation of the state highway department.

After summoning Knisely before them to get an official version of his conversation with Lorbach, members of the tax commission expressed confidence in Knisely's integrity and indicated that they believe him innocent of any wrong doing and sent him back to his duties.

TAYLOR TALKS

Simultaneously the man who introduced Knisely to Lorbach told newspaper men that Lorbach knew and told about the alleged bribe offer even before he met Knisely.

He is James W. Taylor, Columbus lumber broker. He asserted that "evidently Lorbach has named the wrong man having somebody else in mind."

"Lorbach," Taylor said, "told me several weeks before I introduced him to Knisely that an effort was on foot to buy off the committee."

Denying Lorbach's accusations, Knisely told the tax commission that Lorbach introduced the subject of bribery at their meeting.

"Great pressure is being brought to bear on me to end this investigation and I could get a nice sum of money if I called it off" Lorbach told him Knisely said.

TALKED OF SUM

Lorbach told the committee he met Knisely at a Columbus hotel, in March, and had breakfast with him several times. Upon one occasion, he declared, the man said he understood there was $150,000 to be had if the highway department probe is halted.

"I asked him why it couldn't be a quarter of a million," Lorbach continued. "He said the amount didn't make any difference if I would play the game. Then I told him I couldn't be bribed for any amount."

Other members of the committee besides Lorbach are Senators William A. Greenlund and Laurence H. Norton, Cleveland, Earl Lewis, St. Clairsville, D. H. De Armond, Hamilton, and Frank E. Whittemore, Akron.

STAG PARTY

A stag party will be held Wednesday evening at the Pickaway country club.

Tokyo Welcomes "Flying Colonel" And Wife Today

TOKYO, Aug. 26.—The capital of the land of cherry blossoms gave the flying Lindberghs a huge ovation this afternoon as their black monoplane whirled down from overcast skies to the surface of a lake near Kasumigaura airdome here.

More than thirty thousand persons, including almost the entire American colony of Tokyo, and high Japanese officials, were on hand to roar a welcome to the couple, whose arrival had been awaited with anticipation for more than a week.

Their reception here rivalled in cordiality any they have received in other cities and it was probably the most colorful of all. Young Japan was represented at the flying field by officials in cutaway coats, striped trousers and high hats and thousands of others in occidental business clothes. There were youths in blazers and sport attire and maidens with bobbed hair.

Old Japan turned out in force in flowered silk kimonos of all colors and rickshaws crowded against taxicabs and bicycles.

The Lindberghs landed at 2:09 p. m., (1.09 a. m., E. S. T.), as their engine stopped and the plane came to a stop near the landing stage, the crowd surged forward shouting "Banzai," an expression equivalent to hurrah.

The aviator and his wife smiled in return and shook hands with the welcoming committee. Escorted to the microphone set up near, he radioed his greetings to Japan.

He had no sooner finished speaking when the announcer gave the news of the death of former Premier Hamaguchi, who was shot by an assassin last November. The death of the Premier may interfere with the six-day programme of the government for the entertainment of the Lindberghs.

TOKYO, Aug. 26.—In the midst of the celebrations over the safe arrival of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, Japan was plunged into sorrow today by the death of former Premier Yuko Hamaguchi, who succumbed at his home from complications resulting from a bullet wound inflicted by an assassin last November.

Hamaguchi was shot down on the platform of a railway station as he was leaving Tokyo to attend naval maneuvers off the coast. His assailant, a young Japanese radical, was overpowered by the Premier's aides and arrested

For weeks, Premier Hamaguchi hovered between life and death. Two serious operations were resorted to in an attempt to save his life, and while he successfully passed the crisis, he was never restored to normal health.

Hamaguchi for many years was one of the outstanding figures in Japanese public and political life. Born in 1870 in Kochi-Ken, he was educated at the Tokyo Imperial University, and was admitted to the bar soon after receiving his degree. He entered into political life at an early age, his first post being that of director of the tobacco monopoly bureau, which he held from 1907 to 1912.

Mrs. Veres, who according to police is known as the "the witch" to her neighbors, received approximately $20,000 on insurance policies of the men who named her as beneficiary.

Mrs Veres was arrested in 1925, charged with murder and then ultimately released after a probe into the other deaths Five of the men died of acute alcoholism, two others succumbed to carbon monoxide poisoning and two hanged themselves.

The latest death occured yesterday when Stev Mak, 68-year-old roomer, fell from a ladder through an open attic window of the three room frame dwelling. Injuries received in the three story fall caused his death.

According to Mrs. Veres, the man lost his balance while working on the ladder and fell. Police, in filing the murder charges, maintained that all of the bruises on Mak's head and neck could not have been sustained in one fall.

POLITICS NOW TOPIC OF DAY AT ASHVILLE

Six Men After Favor for Marshal-Street Commissioner's Post

FRIDLEY IS SILENT

Hottest Contest in Years Expected There

Up in Ashville where politics seems to be the chief topic of the day, citizens are preparing for one of the hottest municipal elections the village has had in years.

To date there are six men who have announced their candidacy for the street commissioner and town marshal job, which is a combination office paying approximately $150 a month. It is also expected that there will be at least two more men who will yet announce their aspirations for the brass button office.

GRIFFITH QUESTION.

Those who have already announced their candidacy for the police street commissioner job are, Fred Costlow, John Hudson, Sam Ryan, Reuben Weber, Samuel Dolby and Edward Dewey. The present marshal, G. D. Griffith, states that he will not be a candidate but close friends of his claim his name will be among those printed on the ballot this fall. At the last village election Griffith did not announce his candidacy until the last minute and it is generally thought that he will do the same thing this year.

If Griffith throws his hat into the ring it is a pretty sure thing that he will be in the fight in the heated race.

HEDGES MAY RUN

So far there are three men who have petitioned for the office of mayor of the village of Ashville. They are, Squire J. R. Hoover, Orville R. Mithoff, a groceryman and sports promoter, and Emmet Fraunfelter, the exticket agent of the Scioto Valley Traction Co. The present chief executive Mayor S. D. Fridley like Marshal Griffith says that he will not be in the race but his friends who seem to know his intentions well, say that he will be up for re-election.

Other men who are expected to be in the race and who will announce their candidacy within the next few days are, J. R. Hedges, lumber yard proprietor and T. R. Acord, barber. Hedges is a brother of Mayor B. T. Hedges. Acord is a present councilman of the village and has long been a factor in politics in the northern Pickaway-co village.

ALL INDEPENDENTS

The political fight for the village offices will not be made on separate tickets, instead of being Democrats vs Republicans, all candidates will run on an independent ticket and the matter of party politics will not be an issue

ELECTION COST IN STATE HIT BY INSTITUTE

Half Million Spent Each Year in Excess of What Is Needed

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 26.—Stating that Ohio spends at least $510,000 more than necessary each year in conducting the annual elections, the Ohio Institute, a governmental research organization, urged an immediate reduction of election costs in a report made public today.

In 1930, a total of $2,859,313 was spent by the state to obtain the votes of its citizens at the polls. This expenditure was termed as "excessive" by the report of the institute.

Money can be saved by increasing the size of precincts, reducing the number of full-time employes and cutting salaries "to correspond to those paid in private employ," more general use of public buildings for polling places, handling late registrations at the central election office, and by more careful purchasing, the report declared.

EACH COST 91 CENTS

Every vote cast in 1930 cost the state 91 cents, it was said. In eight large urban communities, where a drastic expense cut was recommended, expenditures in 1930 ranged from $1.01 per vote in Stark-co to $1.42 per vote in Lucas-co.

Comparing these figures with the expenditures in other states, the report revealed that the average cost per vote in many large cities was much less than in Ohio. During a period of four years, 1926 to 1929, the average expenditure per vote in Detroit was 81 cents; St. Louis, 72 cents; Milwaukee, 51 cents, and Minneapolis, 36 cents, according to the report

"No single factor has greater effect on election costs than precinct size", the report stated. An increase in the size of the precincts

PUMPKIN SHOW HORSE EVENT IS CERTAINTY

Animals to be Placed on E. Main-st Between Pickaway, Washington

WILL OPEN EVENT

Big Parade Planned for Wednesday Night

The horse will have its day! And the day may be extended into four days for a horse show will be a part of the 1931 Circleville Pumpkin Show, to be held Oct. 7, 8, 9, and 10, slightly more than a month away.

Definite plans were made for this extraordinary event at the regular Pumpkin Show meeting this week when persons interested in staging this classic were present. H. Stanley Lewis, county farm agent, was placed in charge of the department to supervise the event, Elmer Wolf was made chairman of the draft horse display, L. E. Miller of the light harness display and Elmer F. Coles of the saddle and pony class.

The horses will be stationed on E. Main-st between Pickaway and Washington-sts. L. E. Miller, city service director, has promised to place a cushion of sand on the pavement just as was done in days in which the horse was the feature of any public gathering.

PLAN PROGRAM

A definite program for showing the horses has not yet been mapped out although it is certain a horse parade will be the feature of the opening night's event, Wednesday, Oct. 7. All horses available will be brought into the city for this big parade which will start the Pumpkin Show off on the right course. In several years heretofore a band concert with a few talks had featured the opening night, which has always been a more or less formality. This year with the horse event on Wednesday evening, concessionaries will be given the advantage of the extra crowd which will be brought to town for this event.

Horse shows in several county fairs through Ohio this year have proven very successful, proving to be feature events in nearly every locality.

Fancy dress parade for ponies and several other events are being planned, details of which must be worked out in all.

It is expected that many of the county's leading horse-men, including Oren Updyke, Bernard Young, Charles Roof, Frank Bennett and others will assist the Pumpkin Show society in making the horse show one of the finest ever held here.

Cash prizes and ribbons have been arranged for the different classes.

Simultaneously the man who introduced Knisely to Lorbach told newspaper men that Lorbach knew and told about the alleged bribe offer even before he met Knisely.

He is James W. Taylor, Columbus lumber broker. He asserted that "evidently Lorbach has named the wrong man having somebody else in mind."

"Lorbach," Taylor said, "told me several weeks before I introduced him to Knisely that an effort was on foot to buy off the committee."

Denying Lorbach's accusations, Knisely told the tax commission that Lorbach introduced the subject of bribery at their meeting.

"Great pressure is being brought to bear on me to end this investigation and I could get a nice sum of money if I called it off" Lorbach told him Knisely said.

TALKED OF SUM

Lorbach told the committee he met Knisely at a Columbus hotel, in March, and had breakfast with him several times. Upon one occasion, he declared, the man said he understood there was $150,000 to be had if the highway department probe is halted.

"I asked him why it couldn't be a quarter of a million," Lorbach continued. "He said the amount didn't make any difference if I would play the game. Then I told him I couldn't be bribed for any amount."

Other members of the committee besides Lorbach are Senators William A. Greenlund and Laurence H. Norton, Cleveland, Earl Lewis, St. Clairsville, D. H. De Armond, Hamilton, and Frank E. Whittemore, Akron.

Tokyo Welcomes "Flying Colonel" And Wife Today

TOKYO, Aug. 26.—The capital of the land of cherry blossoms gave the flying Lindberghs a huge ovation this afternoon as their black monoplane whirled down from overcast skies to the surface of a lake near Kasumigaura airdome here.

More than thirty thousand persons, including almost the entire American colony of Tokyo, and high Japanese officials, were on hand to roar a welcome to the couple, whose arrival had been awaited with anticipation for more than a week.

Their reception here rivalled in cordiality any they have received in other cities and it was probably the most colorful of all. Young Japan was represented at the flying field by officials in cutaway coats, striped trousers and high hats and thousands of others in occidental business clothes. There were youths in blazers and sport attire and maidens with bobbed hair.

Old Japan turned out in force in flowered silk kimonos of all colors and rickshaws crowded against taxicabs and bicycles.

The Lindberghs landed at 2:09 p. m., (1.09 a. m., E. S. T.), as their engine stopped and the plane came to a stop near the landing stage, the crowd surged forward shouting "Banzai,," an expression equivalent to hurrah.

The aviator and his wife smiled in return and shook hands with the welcoming committee. Escorted to the microphone set up near, he radioed his greetings to Japan.

He had no sooner finished speaking when the announcer gave the news of the death of former Premier Hamaguchi, who was shot by an assassin last November. The death of the Premier may interfere with the six-day programme of the government for the entertainment of the Lindberghs.

TOKYO, Aug. 26.—In the midst of the celebrations over the safe arrival of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, Japan was plunged into sorrow today by the death of former Premier Yuko Hamaguchi, who succumbed at his home from complications resulting from a bullet wound inflicted by an assassin last November.

Hamaguchi was shot down on the platform of a railway station as he was leaving Tokyo to attend naval maneuvers off the coast. His assailant, a young Japanese radical, was overpowered by the Premier's aides and arrested.

For weeks, Premier Hamaguchi hovered between life and death. Two serious operations were resorted to in an attempt to save his life, and while he successfully passed the crisis, he was never restored to normal health.

Hamaguchi for many years was one of the outstanding figures in Japanese public and political life. Born in 1870 in Kochi-Ken, he was educated at the Tokyo Imperial University, and was admitted to the bar soon after receiving his degree. He entered into political life at an early age, his first post being that of director of the tobacco monopoly bureau, which he held from 1907 to 1912.

WOMAN FACES TENTH MURDER

Mrs. Rose Verss, 48, Charged With Slaying Roomer; Was Up Before.

DETROIT, Aug. 26—Formal charges of murder were lodged todays against Mrs. Rose Veres, aged 48, as the result of the death of the tenth 'insurance" roomer in her umkept boarding house in a foreign section of the city in the last eight years.

Mrs. Veres, who according to police is known as the "the witch" to her neighbors, received approximately $20,000 on insurance policies of the men who named her as beneficiary.

Mrs. Veres was arrested in 1925, charged with murder and then ultimately released after a probe into the other deaths. Five of the men died of acute alcoholism, two others succumbed to carbon monoxide poisoning and two hanged themselves.

The latest death occured yesterday when Stev Mak, 68-year-old roomer, fell from a ladder through an open attic window of the three room frame dwelling. Injuries received in the three story fall caused his death.

According to Mrs. Veres, the man lost his balance while working on the ladder and fell. Police, in filing the murder charges, maintained that all of the bruises on Mak's head and neck could not have been sustained in one fall.

POLITICS NOW TOPIC OF DAY AT ASHVILLE

Six Men After Favor for Marshal-Street Commissioner's Post

FRIDLEY IS SILENT

Hottest Contest in Years Expected There

Up in Ashville where politics seems to be the chief topic of the day, citizens are preparing for one of the hottest municipal elections the village has had in years.

To date there are six men who have announced their candidacy for the street commissioner and town marshal job, which is a combination office paying approximately $150 a month. It is also expected that there will be at least two more men who will yet announce their aspirations for the brass button office.

GRIFFITH QUESTION

Those who have already announced their candidacy for the police street commissioner job are, Fred Costlow, John Hudson, Sam Ryan, Reuben Weber, Samuel Dolby and Edward Dewey. The present marshal, G. D. Griffith, states that he will not be a candidate but close friends of his claim his name will be among those printed on the ballot this fall. At the last village election Griffith did not announce his candidacy until the last minute and it is generally thought that he will do the same thing this year.

If Griffith throws his hat into the ring it is a pretty sure thing that he will be in the fight in the heated race.

HEDGES MAY RUN

So far there are three men who have petitioned for the office of mayor of the village of Ashville. They are, Spuire J. R. Hoover, Orville R. Mithoff, a groceryman and sports promoter, and Emmet Fraunfelter, the exticket agent of the Scioto Valley Traction Co. The present chief executive Mayor S. D. Fridley like Marshal Griffith says that he will not be in the race but his friends who seem to know his intentions well, say that he will be up for re-election.

Other men who are expected to be in the race and who will announce their candidacy within the next few days are, J. R. Hedges, lumber yard proprietor and T. R. Acord, barber. Hedges is a brother of Mayor B. T. Hedges.. Acord is a present councilman of the village and has long been a factor in politics in the northern Pickaway-co village.

ALL INDEPENDENTS

The political fight for the village offices will not be made on separate tickets, instead of being Demoocrats vs Republicans, all candidates will run on an independent ticket and the matter of party politics will not be an issue.

MRS. ANDERSON, 76, WALNUT-TWP, DIES

Mrs. Susan Anderson, aged 76, wife of J. C. Anderson, Walnut-twp farmer, died Tuesday at 4:30 p. m. at the home. Complications caused her death.

HALL BEGINS TRIP TO NEW ORLEANS

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—James Goodwin Hall, accompanied by Andre De Coppet, took off from Floyd Bennet airport at 5:01 a. m. today in an attempt to set a round trip record for a New York to New Orleans flight.

Hall's plane carried 290 gallons of gasoline, and he planned to refuel at Hanefee field, New Orleans, before starting back.

"I'm doing it for the sport of the thing," Hall remarked. "I expect to return about 7:30 tonight."

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 26.—Consideration of plans for affording relief this fall and winter to destitute families throughout Ohio will be resumed at a meeting of Governor George White's emergency relief committee here this afternoon.

Rowland Haynes, representing President Hoover's relief committee, is scheduled to address the committee, explaining plans of the federal government for relief work.

The committee was expected to select a secretary who would be placed in charge of activities designed to carry out plans approved by the committee.

ELECTION COST IN STATE HIT BY INSTITUTE

Half Million Spent Eeach Year in Excess of What Is Needed

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 26.—Stating that Ohio spends at least $510,000 more than necessary each year in conducting the annual elections, the Ohio Institute, a governmental research organization, urged an immediate reduction of election costs in a report made public today.

In 1930, a total of $2,859,313 was spent by the state to obtain the votes of its citizens at the polls. This expenditure was termed as "excessive" by the report of the institute.

Money can be saved by increasing the size of precincts, reducing the number of full-time employes and cutting salaries "to correspond to those paid in private employ," more general use of public buildings for polling places, handling late registrations at the central election office, and by more careful purchasing, the report declared.

EACH COST 91 CENTS

Every vote cast in 1930 cost the state 91 cents, it was said. In eight large urban communities, where a drastic expense cut was recommended, expenditures in 1930 ranged from $1.01 per vote in Stark-co to $1.42 per vote in Lucas-co.

Comparing these figures with the expenditures in other states, the report revealed that the average cost per vote in many large cities was much less than in Ohio. During a period of four years, 1926 to 1929, the average expenditure per vote in Detroit was 81 cents; St. Louis, 72 cents; Milwaukee, 51 cents, and Minneapolis, 36 cents, according to the report.

"No single factor has greater effect on election costs than precinct size", the report stated. An increase in the size of the precincts

Daugherty, brother of Harry M. Daugherty, attorney general in the Harding cabinet, was named in 16 indictments returned by the grand jury after an investigation of the failure of the bank. He was sentenced to 10 years in the Ohio penitentiary and fined $5,000.

Judges W. W. Pardee, C. G. Washburn and Ross W. Funk, of the Appellate court in Akron, will hear the case.

VINCENT IS HELD

A. T. Vincent, said to be from the Williamsport vicinity, but for sometime apparently going from place to place, was arrested in Highland-co recently, upon a warrant from Justice of the Peace DeWees' court, filed by Howard Craig of Washington C. H. for passing a worthless $15 check.

When arrested Vincent asked to be permitted to go free, that he would make the check good.

PUMPKIN SHOW HORSE EVENT IS CERTAINTY

Animals to be Placed on E. Main-st Between Pickaway, Washington

WILL OPEN EVENT

Big Parade Planned for Wednesday Night

The horse will have its day! And the day may be extended into four days for a horse show will be a part of the 1931 Circleville Pumpkin Show, to be held Oct. 7, 8, 9, and 10, slightly more than a month away.

Definite plans were made for this extraordinary event at the regular Pumpkin Show meeting this week when persons interested in staging this classic were present. H. Stanley Lewis, county farm agent, was placed in charge of the department to supervise the event, Elmer Wolf was made chairman of the draft horse display, L. E. Miller of the light harness display and Elmer F. Coles of the saddle and pony class.

The horses will be stationed on E. Main-st between Pickaway and Washington-sts. L. E. Miller, city service director, has promised to place a cushion of sand on the pavement just as was done in days in which the horse was the feature of any public gathering.

PLAN PROGRAM

A definite program for showing the horses has not yet been mapped out although it is certain a horse parade will be the feature of the opening night's event, Wednesday, Oct. 7. All horses available will be brought into the city for this big parade which will start the Pumpkin Show off on the right course. In several years heretofore a band concert with a few talks had featured the opening night, which has always been a more or less formality. This year with the horse event on Wednesday evening, concessionaries will be given the advantage of the extra crowd which will be brought to town for this event.

Horse shows in several county fairs through Ohio this year have proven very successful, proving to be feature events in nearly every locality.

Fancy dress parade for ponies and several other events are being planned, details of which must be worked out in all.

It is expected that many of the county's leading horse-men, including Oren Updyke, Bernard Young, Charles Roof, Frank Bennett and others will assist the Pumpkin Show society in making the horse show one of the finest ever held here.

Cash prizes and ribbons have been arranged for the different classes.

TAFFE DEATH PROBE IS ON

New Information Is Furnished Police In Slaying of Well Known Youth.

The police department of Columbus after an investigation, will be asked to determine whether the fatal shooting of Paul Taffe, 25, of 1135 Fairwood-ave, Columbus, nephew of Richard and William Taffe, Logan-st, and Mrs. Thomas Howell, Elm-ave, by R. H. Cook, at his home, 29 Lundy-st, Columbus, August 14, was manslaughter on the part of Cook.

New light was thrown on the case Tuesday when volunteered information was given by Arthur Huber, 30, Buttles-ave, Columbus, and William Kettle, Xenia. They said they sat in an auto on N. Wall-st, between the Cook apartment and Huber's home, they heard a man and woman arguing. They said the voices came from Cook's apartment. Then they said they heard a shot fired and saw Cook dragging something from the kitchen of the apartment, across the porch to the head of the steps. They heard a dull thud, and Cook and his wife cleared off a table in the kitchen before any effort was made to call police. They said they failed to hear a dog bark at any time.

Cook maintains he was awakened by the bark of a dog, got up and saw young Taffe coming up the back-stairs of his apartment and when he refused to reveal his identity he fired a shot.

Red Man Rally One Run Short

Staving off a last inning attack when the Red Men had the tying run on first base after two runners had scored, the Coca Colas turned back the Red Men Tuesday evening in a fast game. The final score was 6-5.

Entering the last inning three runs behind, the Red Men got hot after Hickey and Crum were out. Heiskell walked to first base on four straight balls. Watson hit and so did Greeno, both runners crossing the plate. Merriman flied to left field to end the threat.

The Coca Colas scored first in the second inning, came back with one in the third, then the Red Men scored in the fourth and counted twice more in the fifth to take a momentary lead, for the Cokes came back with one marker. The Cokes went ahead, 5-3 in the sixth when they scored twice then finished their scoring with one in the eighth. The Red Man team's two in the ninth was just one short.

Baucher and Wilson at the top of the Coca Cola batting order led the hitters, touching George Crum three times each. Watson, Greeno and Radcliff each hit safely twice for the Indians.

Nine hits were gleaned off the offerings of Frank Lynch while the Coca Colas got 14 off Crum, each man hitting safely at least once.

This evening the Coca Colas and Independent Grocers tangle for the last time this season.

M'LARNIN, IDOL OF THOUSANDS, HAS HERO IN GENERAL HOGAN

BY LES CONKLIN
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK—Jimmy McLarnin, himself the idol of thousands, has a new hero. He is Dan Hogan, once a major general in the Free State Army of Ireland.

The Irish knockout king is ever a devoted listener to yarn of sanguine battles on the Ould Sod, finding them much more gripping than tales of shindigs of the ring And none can spin the sages of the great battle of Irish freedom better than the valorous Hogan, upon whose head once was placed a tidy sum.

Hogan, here to end his days in the land of freedom, became acquainted with McLarnin when he built Jimmy's training quarters in a hamlet on Long Island.

McLarnin is the uncrowned king of the village. The principal street has been named "McLarnin Avenue," in his honor.

Jimmy has invested considerable of his ring earnings in property there. When some of the present playboys of the ring are selling apples and lead pencils or trying to eke out a living around gymnasiums, McLarnin will be a country squire living a life of ease and comfort.

But to get back to General Hogan. Of an evening, McLarnin will sit spellbound for hours in his little home while the prince of rebels recounts his glamorous, and sometimes ghastly, experiences in the great army for Irish liberty. Of the great war with the hated "Black and Tans" he speaks of the hanging of Sir Roger Casement; of the lynching of Pierce, Connelly and other patriots who fought by his side in the fight for Irish independence.

Major-General Hogan has cooled off quite a bit since the days when he was a fiery leader of the Emerald Isle.

"One day in New York recently," he relates, "I met a fellow who looked familiar. After thinking back a few moments, I recalled him. Shure, and it was a rapscallion who ordered me to be shot at sunrise one day during the rebellion.

GEHRIG FRANKLY AFTER RECORD OF RUNS SENT HOME

NEW YORK—Lou Gehrig, slugging first baseman of the New York Yankees, has an ambition to set a new record for runs batted in this season.

At this writing "Hungry Lou" is in a fair way of realizing this ambition as well as setting the place in two other departments—home run hitting and scoring runs.

It is in the all-important "RBI" specialty, however, that Gehrig especially wants to shine. At this writing he had driven in more than 130 runs, a few more than Babe Ruth, his closest rival. Lou set a new mark in this department in 1927 when he sent 175 runners over the plate with his crashing wallops, a mark which stood until Louis "Hack" Wilson of the Cubs went rampaging last year and drove home no fewer than 190 counters.

"I'm going after that record," said Lou. "Of course I'm going to try to lead the team in home runs, but with Ruth still smashing the fences and likely to go on a home run rampage it is hard to say what will happen I think Ruth is the greatest hitter that ever lived, and will be glad to beat him out in any branch of fun producing activity.

I figure I'm in exactly the right spot to crowd the record or break it. Batting behind Combs and Sewell with Ruth coming third gives me a chance. Pitchers are still walking Ruth plenty. They walked him five times recently in a double header. You just can't help driving in runs when you get chnces like that."

It might be timely to say that Gehrig is moving around the base lines faster this season than in previous years. For a man who tops the 200 mark with plenty to spare he just gets up and goes Ability to grab an extra base on outfield hits has aided Gehrig in scoring runs He hits more line drives for distance than any other man on the club

BROWN KEEPS BANTAM TITLE

The crowd, around 10,000, paid close to $20,000 to witness the struggle.

The fight went the full 15 rounds and from the 10th round onward Sanstol kept gaining steadily and was tiring out his tall rival as the fight progressed to the finish.

In the 14th Sanstol carried the fight to Brown, ripping him hard with jolting body punches, but his stanch rally was not sufficient to offset the marked superiority of Brown in the earlier rounds.

The battle ended in a slugging bee, with both men fighting toe to toe at the bell.

They both weighed in at 117 pounds

Wake Up Your Liver Bile —Without Calomel

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If the bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resist substitutes.

WRESTLING CARD TONITE

Dolby and Dunkle To Meet In Main Event of Evening; Two Others.

A wrestling card which is expected to be chuck full of flying tackles, agonizing arm stretches, crab holds, arm spins, scissors attacks, back slams and everything else will be staged at Evert's Arena this evening beginning at 8 30 o'clock.

Promoter Frank Davis has arranged three o fthe best matches which have been seen this year and the participants are in good condition, ready to do battle.

The main go will see Merle Dolby of Indianapolis, a welterweight wrestler who has twice met Jack Reynolds for the world's title and Wayne Dunkle, U. S. Navy champion, step on the mat to begin their two out of three falls match

Both are such clever mat-men that nothing better could be said about one than the other. Dunkle is well known around here, although never appearing on any cards at the local arena he has wrestled some of the best mat men in the state in other cities, including London, Lancaster, Logan and Chillicothe. Dunkle is fast.

The semi-final of the evening will see local mat fans' popular Gypsie Joe Gardner of Columbus take on Wild Pete Dando, Columbus, for a two out of three falls to a finish match. Joe will have one of his toughest opponents of the year, when he attempts to pin Dando as the latter is a wow of a wrestler.

The eye-opener of the evening which is a grudge as well as handicap match will see a boy and a man climb upon the mat to pin each other or bust Bill Miller, well known 150 pound wrestler of Columbus, is mad at Hans Muir, 195 pounder of Germany and therfore wishes to take out his spite at the card tonight. Frank Davis consented to bring the two together, and probably the most exciting and amusing match of the evening will be seen here. Miller, who will have to buck against 45 pounds odds will have plenty to overcome, but he is depending upon his fiery temper to urge him on and if necessary to draw blood

Muir has been successful in his previous matches and fans must admit, even though at all times he has been given the razberries, that he is a clever wrestler and smart in the tricks of using the painful holds at the correct moment. Miller is rather young in the game but has plenty of pep and vigor and expects to beat up the big Dutch boy

With fair or better weather prevailing the matches are expected to get underway promptly at 8:30 p m

BENNY CHAPMAN NOW A REAL STAR

NEW YORK, Aug. 26—"As a second baseman he would make a swell outfielder."

That was what Manager Joe McCarthy said about his bright boy, Ben Chapman, after he watched the lad work out at St Petersburg this spring.

And the quip so inspired the Yanks' manager that when Dusty Cooke was injured he sent Chapman into the outfield. To tell the truth McCarthy did not expect much but today he had to admit he drew one of the shining new stars of baseball

Chapman accounted for his 51st stolen base yesterday as the Yanks turned back the Chicago White Sox with Herb Pennock handling the horse collars Not since 1922, when George Sisler accomplished the feat, has anyone done so well in common and grand larceny. In 1920 Sam Rice of Washington swiped 62 bases and Chapman has a chance to equal that record this season. Although Ty Cobb's American League record of 96 is just as safe as though locked up in the United States mint

FOUR-H CLUBS ENROLL 42,000

Enrollment in the several thousand 4-H clubs for rural boys and girls in Ohio, increased 15 per cent this year over the record figure of a year ago, and now, reports to the Ohio State University from the county extension agents show, the total number of young people in this organization is 42,000 Eighty-four counties in Ohio are now promoting club work

In Pickaway-co 225 boys and girls are taking part in at least one of the 47 activities which are sponsored by the 4-H clubs in this state Last year the enrollment in this county was 191

The 4-H club movement, national in its scope, reaches out now to almost 900,000 boys and girls on farms in the United States and Hawaii, according to the United States Department of Agriculture.

During the summer at least 85 per cent of these 42,000 club members will exhibit some product of their project activities at one of the numerous county fairs in Ohio, at the State Fair, Aug. 31 to Sept. 5, or at local shows.

In recognition for their work many of them will receive small cash prizes, but by far the larger number will receive an alphabetical grading, A, B, C, or D, or a ribbon These exhibits will range from a small girl's bit of needlework to a larger boy's pig or calf. Without an exhibit a club member is not considered to have completed his club project.

Red Man Rally One Run Short

Staving off a last inning attack when the Red Men had the tying run on first base after two runners had scored, the Coca Colas turned back the Red Men Tuesday evening in a fast game. The final score was 6-5.

Entering the last inning three runs behind, the Red Men got hot after Hickey and Crum were out. Heiskell walked to first base on four straight balls. Watson hit and so did Greeno, both runners crossing the plate. Merriman flied to left field to end the threat.

The Coca Colas scored first in the second inning, came back with one in the third, then the Red Men scored in the fourth and counted twice more in the fifth to take a momentary lead, for the Cokes came back with one marker. The Cokes went ahead, 5-3 in the sixth when they scored twice then finished their scoring with one in the eighth. The Red Man team's two in the ninth was just one short.

Baucher and Wilson at the top of the Coca Cola batting order led the hitters, touching George Crum three times each. Watson, Greeno and Radcliff each hit safely twice for the Indians.

Nine hits were gleaned off the offerings of Frank Lynch while the Coca Colas got 14 off Crum, each man hitting safely at least once.

This evening the Coca Colas and Independent Grocers tangle for the last time this season.

M'LARNIN, IDOL OF THOUSANDS, HAS HERO IN GENERAL HOGAN

BY LES CONKLIN
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK—Jimmy McLarnin, himself the idol of thousands, has a new hero. He is Dan Hogan, once a major general in the Free State Army of Ireland.

The Irish knockout king is ever a devoted listener to yarn of sanguine battles on the Ould Sod, finding them much more gripping than tales of shindigs of the ring. And none can spin the sages of the great battle of Irish freedom better than the valorous Hogan, upon whose head once was placed a tidy sum.

Hogan, here to end his days in the land of freedom, became acquainted with McLarnin when he built Jimmy's training quarters in a hamlet on Long Island.

McLarnin is the uncrowned king of the village. The principal street has been named "McLarnin Avenue," in his honor.

Jimmy has invested considerable of his ring earnings in property there. When some of the present playboys of the ring are selling apples and lead pencils or trying to eke out a living around gymnasiums, McLarnin will be a country squire living a life of ease and comfort.

But to get back to General Hogan. Of an evening, McLarnin will sit spellbound for hours in his little home while the prince of rebels recounts his glamorous, and sometimes ghastly, experiences in the great army for Irish liberty. Of the great war with the hated "Black and Tans" he speaks: of the hanging of Sir Roger Casement; of the lynching of Pierce, Connelly and other patriots who fought by his side in the fight for Irish independence.

Major-General Hogan has cooled off quite a bit since the days when he was a fiery leader of the Emerald Isle.

"One day in New York recentil," he relates, "I met a fellow who looked familiar. After thinking back a few moments, I recalled him. Shure, and it was a rapscallion who ordered me to be shot at sunrise one day during the rebellion.

GEHRIG FRANKLY AFTER RECORD OF RUNS SENT HOME

NEW YORY—Lou Gehrig, slugging first baseman of the New York Yankees, has an ambition to set a new record for runs batted in this season.

At this writing "Hungry Lou" is in a fair way of realizing this ambition as well as setting the place in two other departments—home run hitting and scoring runs.

It is in the all-important "RBI" specialty, however, that Gehrig especially wants to shine. At this writing he had driven in more than 130 runs, a few more than Babe Ruth, his closest rival. Lou set a new mark in this department in 1927 when he sent 175 runners over the plate with his crashing wallops, a mark which stood until Louis "Hack" Wilson of the Cubs went rampaging last year and drove home no fewer than 190 counters.

'I'm going after that record," said Lou. "Of course I'm going to try to lead the team in home runs, but with Ruth still smashing the fences and likely to go on a home run rampage it is hard to say what will happen. I think Ruth is the greatest hitter that ever lived, and will be glad to beat him out in any branch of fun producing activity.

I figure I'm in exactly the right spot to crowd the record or break it. Batting behind Combs and Sewell with Ruth coming third gives me a chance. Pitchers are still walking Ruth plenty. They walked him five times recently in a double header. You just can't help driving in runs when you get chnces like that."

It might be timely to say that Gehrig is moving around the base lines faster this season than in previous years. For a man who tops the 200 mark with plenty to spare he just gets up and goes. Ability to grab an extra base on outfield hits has aided Gehrig in scoring runs. He hits more line drives for distance than any other man on the club.

BROWN KEEPS BANTAM TITLE

Lanky Panama Al Withstands Rally of Pete Sanstol in Montreal.

The crowd, around 10,000, paid close to $20,000 to witness the struggle.

The fight went the full 15 rounds and from the 10th round onward Sanstol kept gaining steadily and was tiring out his tall rival as the fight progressed to the finish.

In the 14th Sanstol carried the fight to Brown, ripping him hard with jolting body punches, but his stanch rally was not sufficient to offset the marked superiority of Brown in the earlier rounds.

The battle ended in a slugging bee, with both men fighting toe to toe at the bell.

They both weighed in at 117 pounds.

Wake Up Your Liver Bile —Without Calomel

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute.

WRESTLING CARD TONITE

Dolby and Dunkle To Meet In Main Event of Evening; Two Others.

A wrestling card which is expected to be chuck full of flying tackles, agonizing arm stretches, crab holds, arm spins, scissors attacks, back slams and everything else will be staged at Evert's Arena this evening beginning at 8:30 o'clock.

Promoter Frank Davis has arranged three o fthe best matches which have been seen this year and the participants are in good condition, ready to do battle.

The main go will see Merle Dolby of Indianapolis, a welterweight wrestler who has twice met Jack Reynolds for the world's title and Wayne Dunkle, U. S. Navy champion, step on the mat to begin their two out of three falls match.

Both are such clever mat-men that nothing better could be said about one than the other. Dunkle is well known around here, although never appearing on any cards at the local arena he has wrestled some of the best mat men in the state in other cities, including London, Lancaster, Logan and Chillicothe. Dunkle is fast.

The semi-final of the evening will see local mat fans' popular Gypsie Joe Gardner of Columbus take on Wild Pete Dando, Columbus, for a two out of three falls to a finish match. Joe will have one of his toughest opponents of the year, when he attempts to pin Dando as the latter is a wow of a wrestler.

The eye-opener of the evening which is a grudge as well as handicap match will see a boy and a man climb upon the mat to pin each other or bust. Bill Miller, well known 150 pound wrestler of Columbus, is mad at Hans Muir, 195 pounder of Germany and therfore wishes to take out his spite at the card tonight. Frank Davis consented to bring the two together, and probably the most exciting and amusing match of the evening will be seen here. Miller, who will have to buck against 45 pounds odds will have plenty to overcome, but he is depending upon his fiery temper to urge him on and if necessary to draw blood.

Muir has been successful in his previous matches and fans must admit, even though at all times he has been given the razberries, that he is a clever wrestler and smart in the tricks of using the painful holds at the correct moment. Miller is rather young in the game but has plenty of pep and vigor and expects to beat up the big Dutch boy.

DEVELOPMENT OF TEACHING QUALITIES IS PRESENT PLAN

COLUMBUS.—That educational facilities in Ohio shall not be curtailed but, on the contrary, shall be expended to a higher degree of effectiveness in his administration at reduced cost to the taxpayer is the aim of Governor George White. "Development of higher teaching standards and elimination of expensive frills," is the policy the administration has adopted for application to the schools of the state through Dr. B. O. Skinner, recently appointed director of education.

Dr. Skinner has set about to realize this purpose by making it clear that he will insist upon employment of thoroughly qualified teachers and the elimination of under-trained teachers but he will not insist upon construction of expensive gymnasiums and auditoriums as indispensable adjuncts to the educational system. Stressing of the spiritual values in education, rather than the material things represented by brick and mortar, is to mark his conception of the administration's program.

That he is well equipped to chart a new course in state supervision of education is the view of The Cleveland Plain Dealer which remarks:

"If his record and if the first impressions he has made at the capital mean anything, he will fit well into the picture and the taxpayer for once will get a 'break' in the state department of education. For years there has been something more than a suspicion that the department has been conducted not for the benefit of the pupil but for the benefit of the professional 'school man,' who frequently is a woman; that the huge machine top-heavy with supervisory and administrative functionaries has almost imperceptibly imposed itself upon the taxpayer, not for the purpose of giving the taxpayer anything he wants or even thinks he needs, but merely to build up this particular branch of bureaucracy that flourishes in Columbus.

"Dr. Skinner was consulted freely while Governor White and his advisers were engaged in the task of trimming down the budget requests made for the department by former Governor Myers Cooper—requests that, if granted, would have contained a large quota of the luxuries, frills and fancies with which the department was overloaded—and Dr. Skinner, according to the unanimous verdict, 'played ball.' He is in full harmony with the economy program; his idea apparently is not to extract the maximum amount possible from the state treasury for the benefit of the 'professional man' but to produce the maximum result with the minimum of expense."

Acceptance of the cuts in income of Ohio State University made by the legislature and by Howard L. Bevis, state finance director, who pared all departmental budgets 7 per cent in order to conform to Governor White's economy requirements, will not hamper the university's efficiency This is the belief of Dr. George W. Rightmire, president of the institution, who in a public statement reflected the same spirit of willingness to spend more carefully that has been manifested by other executives of the government.

Calling upon the university staff to "accept the situation cheerfully and throw into the work of the University all the energy and enthusiasm we have," Dr. Rightmire pointed out:

"The state government is doing the best it can under the widespread financial depression and the University faculty and administrative staff will certainly render most cordial, co-operative and effective service."

PAVE STREETS PROVIDE JOBS

Easy Matter For Road Builders While Economic Conditions Helped.

How to make an old street a good street is a comparatively easy matter for modern road builders. The prevailing low construction price and the all too ample supply of labor make it an ideal time for municipalities to smooth up at least a noteworthy part of the mileage of bumpy and expensive pavements that exist in every city and town.

As has been repeatedly pointed out by economists, public construction on a large scale is the best way to meet unemployment. Construction work calls for probably greater numbers of workmen than any other industry. Thomas H. Mac Donald, chief of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, has declared that no less than three-fourths of the money spent in road construction goes into the pockets of labor. This year several hundred thousand men are employed in building rural highways, but the activity in country roads is greatly nullified by the failure of cities and towns to improve their streets and to build other needed public improvements.

Most municipalities have more poor streets than they have good ones, notwithstanding that these rough pavements may be costing the taxpayers and motorist more than if proper surfaces were constructed. Streets improperly surfaced are constantly in need of repair and, largely because no direct assessment is made for these repairs as the money is taken out of general funds, the taxpayers may be unaware o fthe high cost. The taxpayer-motorist also loses for rough surfaces run up the cost of operating cars through excess tire and car wear.

Pavements, no matter how rough, can easily be resurfaced with a rigid material if the base is in any sort of stable condition. The former high upkeep charges will be eliminated and the city may enjoy maintenance cost so low they are scarcely noticable. Glen Ellyn, Illinois, for instance, has repaired practically every street in the city and the maintenance cost averages no more than $35 per mile yearly, much less than other cities are paying to keep up poor pavements

So in view of the economies that may be effected through resurfacing properly, the municipality may provide a great dead of employment and obtain bargain prices facing properly the municipality for facilities they actually need.

VIENNA. — The 14th century crypt of the Hapsburg princes, beneath the famous cathedral of St. Stephen, almost forgotten, neglected and partly ruined by subteraneous water, has been reconstructed and will be open to the public.

In this crypt, in the centre of Vienna, Rudolf IV., the founder and builder of the Cathedral, and several other Hapsburg princes are buried.

As recent excavation showed, their burial place is just beside an ancient Roman cemetery from the time of Marc Aurelius, the Roman Emperor who died in Vienna in the second century A. D.

On the other side of the Roman cemetery, are the Capuchin catacombs, in which the Hapsburg Emperors of the 18th and 19th century are resting. There is not much place for any other dynasty in this neighborhood.

The cancer treatment of a layman, the Croatian school teacher Alois Polsjak, has found the approval of the famous Vienna physician Professor Karl Funke.

After having been thoroughly tried and experimented with for more than one year in the clinic of Professor Funke, he declared that the ointment offered to him by the unknown school teacher, produced many complete cures, particularly in cases of cancer of the skin.

Patients suffering with tuberculosis of the skin, lupus, and malignant eczemas were also successfully treated with the ointment of Alois Polsjak, it was announced.

The ointment contains besides some important herbs, arsenic and limeoxyde. It is in reality an old skin medicine, which has been forgotten by physicians and now rediscovered by this layman.

Generally four to six ointments are applied, and the treatment is rather painful, but it is declared that it produces very favorable, and seemingly lasting effects.

After the treatment, which naturally weakens the patient, a nourishing diet is recommended.

The Viennese Medical Faculty, which is particularly cautious and skeptical in the judgment of new methods of treatment, especially those invented by a layman, decided to continue research in connection with Polsjak's discovery.

AUTO, TRAIN CRASH, 5 DIE

Blanchester Crossing is Scene of Fatal Accident; Blame Driver.

BLANCHESTER, O., Aug. 26—Despite the frantic efforts of a watchman to warm them of an approaching train, five persons, occupants of an automobile which was struck by the speeding flyer, were dead here today.

The victims were:

Harry Leakey, 35, paper hanger, driver of the machine.

Mrs. Harry Leakey, 32, his wife.

A young son of the Leakeys.

Mrs. Thomas White, 55, wife of a farmer residing nearby.

Miss Leta White, 14, daughter of Mrs. White.

Leakey, who apparently failed to see the watchman or his red lantern, had a clear view of the track, witnesses said. The flagman waved his lantern and shouted a warning to the passengers in the car as it approached the grade crossing, it was said.

The accident occurred at the main street crossing of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad in the center of Blanchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Leakey are survived by three daughters who were left at home when their parents and their brother went for a drive. Mrs. White is survived by her husband.

COLUMBUS, O.—Duck hunters are being advised by the Division of Conservation that the season will not open this year until Oct. 1st at noon. In former years the season opened Sept. 16th. The season will close Dec. 31st. The new season has been set by federal regulations and by order of the Conservation Council in Ohio.

Another important announcement by Conservation Commissioner J. W. Thompson, is the order made by the Conservation Council and by federal authorities which prohibits hunting waterfowl with the aid of an airplane. It will also be unlawful to attempt to concentrate ducks or geese with a power boat for the purpose of shooting, driving, rallying or stirring them up. Hunting or pursuing game with the use of an automobile is also prohibited.

Legal limits on wild ducks will be 15 per day; geese and brandt, four: Jacksnipe, 15; Coot, 25; Gallinules, 15; Woodcock, 4; Rails, 25 in the aggregate, but not more than 15 of one kind, including King Rail, Virginia Rail, Yellow Rail, and Black Rail; Sora Rail, 25 in one day.

Wild waterfowl may be taken during the open season only from one-half hour before sunrise to sunset, except on the opening day when the season opens at 12 noon.

The sun rises October 2nd at 6:29 and sets at 6:13. Each day the sunrise time is one minute later and sunset one minute earlier, until the end of the season. The sunset is one minute earlier each day, during October. Sportsmen should consult the sunrise and sunset time each day.

FISH WORM FARM

A farmer in Indiana is said to have paid for his farm by selling fish worms for bait. Another farmer made $100 per month selling worms to fishermen. Now fish worm farms are springing up in many states. Near Los Angeles there is a fish worm farm from which worms are shipped parcel post all over the country.

Worms are raised in special kinds of earth beds. These wigglers of a new industry are then packed and sent twisting heathily and will live for 10 days or two weeks, according to the American Game Protective Association.

SPEED BOATS REGULATED

With outboard motors apparently turning every known variety of watercraft into a speedboat, many states are passing regulations to limit the power boat speed, especially in fishing waters and in spawning ground territory. New regulations in Pennsylvania and Michigan, limit the speed and point to unregulated power boats as being detrimental to fish life, aquatic plants and spawning beds. The Indiana legislature forbade power boats on any fishing lakes smaller than 325 acres from April 1st to June 15th, during the spawing season and reduced the speed to 10 miles per hour at other times. The Ohio Division of Conservation expects to regulate power boats on Ohio waters for the same reason.

FRIEND OF SUNDAY WILL PREACH HERE

You recently heard Billy Sunday now you will have an opportunity of hearing a speaker of much local interest, who spent many years of his life as a saloon keeper and a policeman, that knows first hand every angle of the lives of the underworld and its many political fixings.

This interesting speaker is C. D. (Dutch) Zellers of Dayton, O., who was converted and brought to God twenty years ago in East Liverpool, O., and who has ever since been on the firing line for righteousness and clean living.

Do not fail to hear his life's story, when he speaks at our camp meeting at Circleville, Aug. 27 at 2:30 p. m.

His topic will be "Mr. Fix" the right hand fixer for vice and all forms of corruption, liquor and political prevelant in Ohio today.

C. D. (Dutch) Zellers was converted in a Billy Sunday meeting Oct. 27, 1912 and he is a personal friend of Mr. Sunday.

Neither will the hidden dollars secreted in the sugar bowl or down in the left hand corner of the old tin trunk, ever start the wheels of industry spinning if left in their present hiding places. They are as dead as a door nail and of no earthly use whatso ever. So get them out, start them to work and get your needed wants.

Conditions financially are indeed bad, and there are not a few but many who do not have the dollar, but there are hundreds and hundreds of others who have and have in plenty but are hoarding, scrimping and practicing false economy to no small degree, and are delaying prosperity. They have preached hard times so long that they actually believe the times are excessively hard and think they are at the doors and portals of the poor house, with their continued whining on every occasion that presents itself and create the same feeling and pessimistic belief to every one they come in contact with. This feeling should be abolished. They must shake themselves and look with optomistic eyes on the future, talk good times, shed influence among others so as to bring back a feeling of prosperity.

Another Calamity Howler is the (merchant?) storekeeper who is always crying WOLF! WOLF! He is more to blame for bad business and hard times than many others are. It seems to be his particular delight to tell every Tom, Dick and Harry how bad business is. How he is not doing enough to meet his obligations, he is so blind to his own interests and does not realise the fact that he is driving and scaring prospective customers from his store. He should have a split stick put on his tongue and made dumb, he does himself and the entire community an injustice. What he should do is to visit the printer advertise his wares create a sentiment to buy. In selling he will have to go to the jobber and replenish those lines sold. The jobber in turn will have to readjust his stock and go to the manufacturer who in turn will have to buy material and labor which starts business all along the line. It's a cycle within a cycle and the wheels of industry are set in motion and will steadily gain momentum as time goes on and in a few short days everything will be humming and teeming with prosperity. So get out the hidden dollars set them to doing their duty and all will be serene and smooth sailing once more.

DEVELOPMENT OF TEACHING QUALITIES IS PRESENT PLAN

COLUMBUS.—That educational facilities in Ohio shall not be curtailed but, on the contrary, shall be expended to a higher degree of effectiveness in his administration at reduced cost to the taxpayer is the aim of Governor George White. "Development of higher teaching standards and elimination of expensive frills," is the policy the administration has adopted for application to the schools of the state through Dr. B. O. Skinner, recently appointed director of education.

Dr. Skinner has set about to realize this purpose by making it clear that he will insist upon employment of thoroughly qualified teachers and the elimination of under-trained teachers but he will not insist upon construction of expensive gymnasiums and auditoriums as indispensable adjuncts to the educational system. Stressing of the spiritual values in education, rather than the material things represented by brick and mortar, is to mark his conception of the administration's program.

That he is well equipped to chart a new course in state supervision of education is the view of The Cleveland Plain Dealer which remarks:

"If his record and if the first impressions he has made at the capital mean anything, he will fit well into the picture and the taxpayer for once will get a 'break' in the state department of education. For years there has been something more than a suspicion that the department has been conducted not for the benefit of the pupil but for the benefit of the professional 'school man,' who frequently is a woman; that the huge machine top-heavy with supervisory and administrative functionaries has almost imperceptibly imposed itself upon the taxpayer, not for the purpose of giving the taxpayer anything he wants or even thinks he needs, but merely to build up this particular branch of bureaucracy that flourishes in Columbus.

"Dr. Skinner was consulted freely while Governor White and his advisers were engaged in the task of trimming down the budget requests made for the department by former Governor Myers Cooper—requests that, if granted, would have contained a large quota of the luxuries, frills and fancies with which the department was overloaded—and Dr. Skinner, according to the unanimous verdict, 'played ball.' He is in full harmony with the economy program; his idea apparently is not to extract the maximum amount possible from the state treasury for the benefit of the 'professional man' but to produce the maximum result with the minimum of expense."

Acceptance of the cuts in income of Ohio State University made by the legislature and by Howard L. Bevis, state finance director, who pared all departmental budgets 7 per cent in order to conform to Governor White's economy requirements, will not hamper the university's efficiency. This is the belief of Dr. George W. Rightmire, president of the institution, who in a public statement reflected the same spirit of willingness to spend more carefully that has been manifested by other executives of the government.

Calling upon the university staff to "accept the situation cheerfully and throw into the work of the University all the energy and enthusiasm we have," Dr. Rightmire pointed out:

"The state government is doing the best it can under the widespread financial depression and the University faculty and administrative staff will certainly render most cordial, co-operative and effective service."

PAVE STREETS PROVIDE JOBS

How to make an old street a good street is a comparatively easy matter for modern road builders. The prevailing low construction price and the all too ample supply of labor make it an ideal time for municipalities to smooth up at least a noteworthy part of the mileage of bumpy and expensive pavements that exist in every city and town.

As has been repeatedly pointed out by economists, public construction on a large scale is the best way to meet unemployment. Construction work calls for probably greater numbers of workmen than any other industry. Thomas H. Mac Donald, chief of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, has declared that no less than three-fourths of the money spent in road construction goes into the pockets of labor. This year several hundred thousand men are employed in building rural highways, but the activity in country roads is greatly nullified by the failure of cities and towns to improve their streets and to build other needed public improvements.

Most municipalities have more poor streets than they have good ones, notwithstanding that these rough pavements may be costing the taxpayers and motorist more than if proper surfaces were constructed. Streets improperly surfaced are constantly in need of repair and, largely because no direct assessment is made for these repairs as the money is taken out of general funds, the taxpayers may be unaware o fthe high cost. The taxpayer-motorist also loses for rough surfaces run up the cost of operating cars through excess tire and car wear.

Pavements, no matter how rough, can easily be resurfaced with a rigid material if the base is in any sort of stable condition. The former high upkeep charges will be eliminated and the city may enjoy maintenance cost so low they are scarcely noticable. Glen Ellyn, Illinois, for instance, has repaired practically every street in the city and the maintenance cost averages no more than $35 per mile yearly, much less than other cities are paying to keep up poor pavements.

So in view of the economies that may be effected through resurfacing properly, the municipality may provide a great dead of employment and obtain bargain prices facing properly, the municipality for facilities they actually need.

VIENNA. — The 14th century crypt of the Hapsburg princes, beneath the famous cathedral of St. Stephen, almost forgotten, neglected and partly ruined by subteraneous water, has been reconstructed and will be open to the public.

In this crypt, in the centre of Vienna, Rudolf IV., the founder and builder of the Cathedral, and several other Hapsburg princes are buried.

As recent excavation showed, their burial place is just beside an ancient Roman cemetery from the time of Marc Aurelius, the Roman Emperor who died in Vienna in the second century A. D.

On the other side of the Roman cemetery, are the Capuchin catacombs, in which the Hapsburg Emperors of the 18th and 19th century are resting. There is not much place for any other dynasty in this neighborhood.

The cancer treatment of a layman, the Croatian school teacher Alois Polsjak, has found the approval of the famous Vienna physician Professor Karl Funke.

After having been thoroughly tried and experimented with for more than one year in the clinic of Professor Funke, he declared that the ointment offered to him by the unknown school teacher, produced many complete cures, particularly in cases of cancer of the skin.

Patients suffering with tuberculosis of the skin, lupus, and malignant eczemas were also successfully treated with the ointment of Alois Polsjak, it was announced.

The ointment contains besides some important herbs, arsenic and limeoxyde. It is in reality an old skin medicine, which has been forgotten by physicians and now rediscovered by this layman.

Generally four to six ointments are applied, and the treatment is rather painful, but it is declared that it produces very favorable, and seemingly lasting effects.

After the treatment, which naturally weakens the patient, a nourishing diet is recommended.

The Viennese Medical Faculty, which is particularly cautious and skeptical in the judgment of new methods of treatment, especially those invented by a layman, decided to continue research in connection with Polsjak's discovery.

Her's was a most unselfish nature and her greatest joy consisted in adding comfort to those about her and her smile and cherry voice radiated sunshine and scattered gloom

On Our Own Resources

THE individual who is thrown upon his own resources, in a great many instances becomes the man upon whom others depend. His growth, mental and physical, is more than likely to be of a substantial charter. When his perseverance and pluck is crowned with success, well may he take pride in the accomplishment. His family and friends honor him. To them he typifies the spirit that has made American business men and their methods the envy of the world.

A city like an individual is no greater in wealth, strength or otherwise than its citizens make it. It matters not how much wealth, how great the natural advantages of the place, if the people who live there allow the wealth and advantages to lie-dormant, it will never grow.

Circleville has the wealth, it has the natural advantages far in excess of most cities. Its health and climate are advantages that many cities would give untold millions to possess.

Why should not Circleville be the master of its own destiny, why should foreign capital and brains be looked for in the development of the city? Why is it that opportunity after opportunity present themselves, only to be allowed to be killed quickly or die a lingering but sure death? Can it be the fear of being thrown on one's own resource?

The outside promoter who interests local capital and brains in an enterprise, is ordinarily some one far less capable than the associate gained. His interest is naturally and necessarily for the absolute purpose of personal gain.

The city which is made great and developed by its own citizens becomes the city of strength, and the builders, with the consciousness of having brought this about take pride in their accomplishment.

Contrition and Attrition

THERE is a world of intensely interesting things in the dictionary besides answers to crossword puzzles and big words nobody ever uses. In fact some people have been so intrigued by the contents of the dictionary that they study it as zealously as the pious read their Bibles.

Just one of the interesting things almost anyone may run across in a book of words is the differentiation in the definitions of the words "contrition" and "attrition."

The definitions as given by Webster are:

Contrition—denotes deep sorrow for sin growing out of love toward God.

Attrition—such imperfect sorrow for sin as arises from fear of punishment.

In these two short word meanings the philosopher will read a long story of human emotion, weaknesses and traits, the criminologist will descern one of the problems of society and the lay mind will recognize that in which all civilizations have failed.

Every prisoner before the bar pleads his sorrow for his crimes and not infrequently a skeptical magistrate asks him if he would still be sorry if he had not been caught. Unfortunately it must be admitted that courtroom repentance is more often the result of attrition than of contrition.

Courts and social workers refuse to classify as criminals wrongdoers who feel honest contrition. The business of the courts is to distinguish between those who are sorry because of love for God or man and those who are sorry because they got caught.

Charm's Decalague

"TEN Commandments for Poularity" have been formulated for the edification of co-eds in the University of Cincinnati. On the theory that college girls are, in a sense, peacemaker for etiquette and decorum, we submit a few of the edicts ,to wit:

"Always be a lady. Use good taste in selecting your clothes and do not let your actions belie that taste.

"Always be a sport. Do what the majority wants, but not to the detriment of your own convictions and ideals.

"Handing a line is helpful. Even if you are not this type, this "you-great-big-wonderful - boy" stuff does get over—used in moderation, of course.

"Know your current events, politics and athletics (significant equality). It is well to be able to converse on significant subjects as well as light ones.

'First, last and always—be feminine."

FOOLISH FEELINGS

"MAKE-BELIEVE" by FAITH BALDWIN

Copyright, 1930, by Faith Baldwin Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Travers Lorrimer, shell-shocked son of wealthy Margaret Lorrimer, mistakes Mary Lou Thurston, beautiful orphan, for Delight Harford, whom he claims he married in England during the war. At Mrs. Lorrimer's request, Mary Lou assumes the role of Delight. Complications arise when, after months of happy companionship, Travers insists upon knowing if Mary Lou loves him. She realizes she cannot go on acting, for she has grown to care. At the crucial moment Larry Mitchell, Mary Lou's newspaper reporter friend, locates the real Delight acting in a revue. Mrs. Lorrimer, favoring Mary Lou, hopes that Delight is not Travers' wife and that she will return to England. After a sleepless night Mary Lou visits Delight. She finds her hardened by life and misfortune. Mary Lou broaches the subject of Delight's marriage. Delight no longer loves Travers, whom she thought dead. She surmises that Mary Lou loves Travers. Mary Lou asks Delight to give her a week in which to persuade Mrs. Lorrimer to see her.

CHAPTER XLVII.

IF, when the stipulated week was up, that strange, eager little person—what was her name? Thurston?—were to come to her and tell her that Mrs. Lorrimer was still determined to ignore her existence, what should she do?

The only sensible thing to do, thought Delight, was to confront Mrs. Lorrimer, manage to see Lorry, carry the battle into the enemy camp and see what happened then. If, as far as character was concerned, Lorrimer had not changed, Delight thought she knew that he would feel under a sacred obligation. He had been a very chivalrous boy, generous and idealistic, under the hard-boiled veneer of war, the laughter, the almost hysterical gayety of leave-time. She had been dreadfully in love with him, had offered, because of her own surge of emotions, half adolescent, half forced into flower by the unnatural circumstances of war, to go away with him for part of his leave. He had refused. He had insisted that he didn't want her "that way." But wanted her as—his wife.

An Idealist

Was he still idealistic and, well, impractical, she wondered. She thought so, somehow, remembering Mary Lou's almost fantastic story of his fidelity to a memory, his frantic search, his unhappiness at a loss.

Yes, she would be all kinds of a fool not to take advantage of this amazing piece of luck which had come her way.

If Mrs. Lorrimer changed her mind and sent for her or came to her, they would have it out. If she didn't change her mind—well, Delight rather fancied she could change it for her. Meantime, perhaps it would do no harm to go out to Westmill, incognito, and see how the land there lay.

She might catch a glimpse of Lorrimer. She wouldn't make herself known to anyone, but she would rather like to confirm what Evanson had said with her own eyes.

Therefore, on the following morning, which was Sunday, Delight got up at, to her, an ungodly hour, and proceeded to Grand Central station, where she took a train for Connecticut.

At the Westmill station she asked how far the Lorrimer place was. On being told, she looked for a taxi, for she was not in form, and hadn't been for years, to walk several miles even under the ideal conditions formed by a sunny Spring day and a good road flanked with tall budding trees. She had the taxi set her down at some distance from the gates of Westwood house. She wanted, she said, to walk the rest of the way, the weather was so delightful.

The taxi driver meantime, grown loquacious, after the manner of his kind, had regaled her with stories of the Lorrimers; of Lorrimer's long illness and his recent miraculous recovery; of his regained interest in life.

"Why, he's even taken to flying again," said the driver, in awe. "I was talking to him down to the station just the other day. I guess after all the burnt child don't dread the fire none. He's got an awfully pretty girl visiting him and his mother. I remember driving her to Westwood House the day she came here, last Fall."

Castles in the Air

After having made careful inquiries as to the extent of the Lorrimer place, Delight got out of the cab, paid the talkative driver, and proceeded, avoiding the gates, to walk along the main highway which skirted one side of the estate. The sun was warm, her high-heeled shoes not the most practical things in the world to wear on a protracted wandering and she stumbled along, uncomfortably, a little wearily, warm in her Winter coat, wishing savagely that she had been able to afford the smart spring suit she had seen in a Fifth Avenue window. Well, perhaps she could soon! But she had been afraid to spend what little was left over from her salary after the hotel bills and other necessities had been paid. She had to be careful unless, through this lucky chance, she found she no longer need be.

She began to think of little trotteur lapin coats, of tweeds and silks, of evening gowns, of a sable scarf like Mary Lou's, of quantities of the very elaborate underwear and very heavy perfume which she found desirable.

A high fence, or wall, ran around the Lorrimer place. It seemed to Delight that she walked miles on the other side. She was, she reflected somberly, pretty nearly always on the other side. What was it that Harry had said to her once—"Always on the outside, looking in, isn't that so, old girl?" Mustn't think of Harry now. To think of Harry would complicate things dreadfully. Put Harry out of her mind. Forget that he had ever existed. What unlucky fate had caused him to exist, now that this unexpected alteration in fortunes might be in store for her? Play her cards carefully and relegate Harry to the limbo of forgotten madnesses until the time came to dispose of him altogether.

Presently, very tired, she came to a low door in the wall. It had been left open. She peered through, stooping in order to do so. She saw trees and a path, and beyond that a perfect tangle of boxwood hedge which reminded her somehow of England, which she called and thought of as "home."

She went down the two shallow steps, under the little broken arch and through into the pretty path. That corner of the place had, with so many others, been left to grow wild at its own sweet will, with merely the path kept cleared and the underbrush checked. The path wound and twisted through the trees, and Delight followed it idly, something young and untarnished in her responding unconsciously to the frail green shadows of the new leaves, to the unstartled birds, to the dappled sunlight and the bright blue sky.

She forgot, for a moment, almost everything, and was a child again in England.

Before she knew it she had come close to the boxwood hedge and heard voices.

One voice was Mary Lou's. It was quite clear, and Delight stopped, her heart beating fast, and listened. She stepped back and leaned against a tree. Mary Lou was laughing.

"Lorry, you're so silly!" said Mary Lou.

The hedge grew very high and thick, and had been clipped into entertaining formal patterns. It had also been trained into a sort of maze, and was wide, forming a semicircle at the point at which Delight viewed it. Apparently Mary Lou and Lorrimer were sitting there, just beyond her view.

"Well, it's a swell day to be silly," Lorrimer remarked, and Delight leaned forward, listening eagerly. The voice was strange to her and yet touched a chord in her memory. It was deeper than she recalled it but vibrant, as colored with overtones as the voice of the boy she had known, a voice which had stammered love to her, and protestation: "You're all my world, Delight. I'll love you always."

She smiled, a twisted little grimace, remembering.

"Suppose," said Lorrimer, "we ditch this family party and go out to the island this afternoon? I'll take you up for a hop—I want you to see the plane. We won't get ours for a matter of weeks, of course, but you'll get an idea. Perhaps you'd like to choose a color scheme," he inquired, seriously, "for the fittings and what not?"

"Oh, of course, lavender and green!" laughed Mary Lou. "Why not?"

"Sounds rather boudoir," he objected. "Come on, let's go this afternoon, Delight—"

The Eavesdropper

The listener shrank back against the rough bark of the great tree, hearing her name spoken to someone else. She felt like a ghost.

"And," continued Lorrimer, "let me take you up for a ride. You like flying. You'll trust yourself with me, won't you?" he asked.

"You know I would," said Mary Lou, simply.

"But not to me," Lorrimer told her. "Isn't that right?"

She was silent. Suddenly, as the woman who listened waited, her heart beating thickly, and as the sunlight fell in golden splashes on tree and hedge and path, Lorrimer spoke again.

"I'm always breaking promises," he said, "and I know it. But I'm human after all. Seeing you day after day, being with you constantly has only served to convince me how right that boy's love was, long ago, that love which has not altered, save to strengthen and deepen. We knew each other briefly enough, Delight, I'll admit that. We have changed, both of us, you perhaps more than I, basically. But I must have known then the sort of girl you would become, the sort of girl who would return to me, the only girl in the world!"

Group Reading Aloud As A Cure for Stammering

This Method of Instruction in Fluent Speech Has Been Quite Effective, Says Dr. Copeland, Revealing a New Theory as to the Cause of This Impediment.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

STAMMERING is a common distressing affliction. It has been recognized for many centuries. Only within the past few decades has there been any success in the cure of this condition.

Dr. Copeland

In former times it was believed that stammering resulted from some disturbance in the development of the speech organs. It used to be thought, too, that it was caused by coldness of the tongue and that the condition could be removed by drinking wine in moderation because the wine produced heat!

About the middle of the nineteenth century a new theory was advanced. According to this, stammering was due to the fact that the movements of the tongue were retarded. An operation was devised whereby the tongue could be elevated, in the hope and expectation of correcting the trouble. This theory went into the overcrowded wast basket of discarded ideas.

Although surgery has been proved to be of no direct worth in this condition it has its value in correcting associated defects. Such operations are never performed on the tongue, but are used to remove enlarged and diseased tonsils, adenoids, or to straighten and open a deformed nose.

It is now believed that stammering is the result of impediment in thought and that it is not primarily a disorder of the speech organs. This disability affects the speech only because speech follows thought. According to this theory there is an inability of the man who stammers to think the words clearly in his mind.

There are special schools for the training of stammerers. Pupils are placed in classes and instructed in simple methods of fluent speech.

Among such methods is group reading, which is done aloud and in unison. Later the pupils read alone If, at any time, they should stammer the group immediately joins in and thus carries the stammerer over his difficult point. Eventually these pupils find themselves reading alone and gradually they overcome the stammering.

Tremendous strides have been made within the past decade in the study of stammering. Old ideas have been placed on the shelf. New ideas are constantly being tried. It is hoped that in time an effectual treatment for stammering will be established. Then thousands and thousands of children will be relieved from suffering and humiliation.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Those who love romance with a dash of adventure will undoubtedly be fascinate with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayers South Sea island picture, "Never The Twain Shall Meet," which opens at the Cliftona Theater.

Adopted from the story of Peter B. Kyne, the picture has a distinct tang of the islands. W. S. Van Dyke, the director who filmed "White Shadows in the South Seas" and "The Pagan" in Tahiti, has enhanced the color and native part due to his intimate knowledge of the ways of the Polynesians.

Conchita Montenegro, the little Spanish dancer recently brought to America, was almost created for the part of Tamea, the South Sea island siren who, by her exotic wiles and native charm, so blinds the scion of a wealthy American family that he gives up his home, people and business to follow her to her tropical island.

AT THE GRAND

Edmund Lowe is the screen's most versatile lover!

During his long and successful screen career, Eddie has played the masculine lead opposite such renowned beauties and screen favorites as:

Leila Haymas was the favored lady to receive Lowe's woolings in "Part Time Wife," Fox movietone comedy drama of martital upset at the Grand Theater.

SINCLAIR TO QUIT TRACK

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 26.—There was considerable specudation here today whether the retirement from the turf of Harry F. Sinclair is temporary or permanent.

Quite a few of the regulars were of the opinion that when the 25 Sinclair horses in training are put on the block Sept. 3, it will mark the end of Rancocas stable competition.

C. J. Fitzgerald, who will cooperate in conducting the Rancocas sale next Thursday, made the announcement that Sinclair would not be represented in summer racing for the balance of the season.

The explanation given for the sale was Sinclair's business interests have been marking demands on his time that precluded him giving proper attention to his stable.

However, it is generall believed here that Sinclair's decision to dispose of 25 horses next week is resentment toward the turf authorities for their action in barring overnight Rancocas entries, following the poisoning of the filly Ladana recently.

On Our Own Resources

THE individual who is thrown upon his own resources, in a great many instances becomes the man upon whom others depend. His growth, mental and physical, is more than likely to be of a substantial charter. When his perseverance and pluck is crowned with success, well may he take pride in the accomplishment His family and friends honor him To them he typifies the spirit that has made American business men and their methods the envy of the world.

A city like an individual is no greater in wealth, strength or otherwise than its citizens make it. It matters not how much wealth, how great the natural advantages of the place, if the people who live there allow the wealth and advantages to lie-dormant, it will never grow.

Circleville has the wealth, it has the natural advantages far in excess of most cities. Its health and climate are advantages that many cities would give untold millions to possess.

Why should not Circleville be the master of its own destiny, why should foreign capital and brains be looked for in the development of the city? Why is it that opportunity after opportunity present themselves, only to be allowed to be killed quickly or die a lingering but sure death? Can it be the fear of being thrown on one's own resource?

The outside promoter who interests local capital and brains in an enterprise, is ordinarily some one far less capable than the associate gained. His interest is naturally and necessarily for the absolute purpose of personal gain.

The city which is made great and developed by its own citizens becomes the city of strength, and the builders, with the consciousness of having brought this about take pride in their accomplishment.

Contrition and Attrition

THERE is a world of intensely interesting things in the dictionary besides answers to crossword puzzles and big words nobody ever uses. In fact some people have been so intrigued by the contents of the dictionary that they study it as zealously as the pious read their Bibles.

Just one of the interesting things almost anyone may run across in a book of words is the differentiation in the definitions of the words "contrition" and "attrition."

The definitions as given by Webster are:

Contrition—denotes deep sorrow for sin growing out of love toward God.

Attrition—such imperfect sorrow for sin as arises from fear of punishment.

In these two short word meanings the philosopher will read a long story of human emotion, weaknesses and traits, the criminologist will descern one of the problems of society and the lay mind will recognize that in which all civilizations have failed.

Every prisoner before the bar pleads his sorrow for his crimes and not infrequently a skeptical magistrate asks him if he would still be sorry if he had not been caught. Unfortunately it must be admitted that courtroom repentance is more often the result of attrition than of contrition.

Courts and social workers refuse to classify as criminals wrongdoers who feel honest contrition. The business of the courts is to distinguish between those who are sorry because of love for God or man and those who are sorry because they got caught.

Charm's Decalague

"TEN Commandments for Poularity" have been formulated for the edification of co-eds in the University of Cincinnati. On the theory that college girls are, in a sense, peacemaker for etiquette and decorum, we submit a few of the edicts ,to wit.

"Always be a lady Use good taste in selecting your clothes and do not let your actions belie that taste

"Always be a sport Do what the majority wants, but not to the detriment of your own convictions and ideals.

Reading a life is helpful. Even if you are not this type, this "you-great-big-wonderful - boy" stuff does get over—used in moderation of course.

"Know your current events, politics and athletics (significant equality). It is well to be able to converse on significant subjects as well as light ones.

"First, last and always—be feminine."

FOOLISH FEELINGS

Copyright, 1930, by Faith Baldwin Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Travers Lorrimer, shell-shocked son of wealthy Margaret Lorrimer, mistakes Mary Lou Thurston, beautiful orphan, for Delight Harford, whom he claims he married in England during the war. At Mrs. Lorrimer's request, Mary Lou assumes the role of Delight. Complications arise when, after months of happy companionship, Travers insists upon knowing if Mary Lou loves him. She realizes she cannot go on acting, for she has grown to care. At the crucial moment Larry Mitchell, Mary Lou's newspaper reporter friend, locates the real Delight acting in a revue. Mrs. Lorrimer, favoring Mary Lou, hopes that Delight is not Travers' wife and that she will return to England. After a sleepless night Mary Lou visits Delight. She finds her hardened by life and misfortune. Mary Lou broaches the subject of Delight's marriage. Delight no longer loves Travers, whom she thought dead. She surmises that Mary Lou loves Travers. Mary Lou asks Delight to give her a week in which to persuade Mrs. Lorrimer to see her.

CHAPTER XLVII.

IF, when the stipulated week was up, that strange, eager little person—what was her name? Thurston?—were to come to her and tell her that Mrs. Lorrimer was still determined to ignore her existence, what should she do?

The only sensible thing to do, thought Delight, was to confront Mrs. Lorrimer, manage to see Lorry, carry the battle into the enemy camp and see what happened then. If, as far as character was concerned, Lorrimer had not changed, Delight thought she knew that he would feel under a sacred obligation. He had been a very chivalrous boy, generous and idealistic, under the hard-boiled veneer of war, the laughter, the almost hysterical gayety of leave-time. She had been dreadfully in love with him, had offered, because of her own surge of emotions, half adolescent, half forced into flower by the unnatural circumstances of war, to go away with him for part of his leave. He had refused. He had insisted that he didn't want her "that way." But wanted her as—his wife.

An Idealist

Was he still idealistic and, well, impractical, she wondered She thought so, somehow, remembering Mary Lou's almost fantastic story of his fidelity to a memory, his frantic search, his unhappiness at a loss.

Yes, she would be all kinds of a fool not to take advantage of this amazing piece of luck which had come her way.

If Mrs. Lorrimer changed her mind and sent for her or came to her, they would have it out. If she didn't change her mind—well, Delight rather fancied she could change it for her. Meantime, perhaps it would do no harm to go out to Westmill, incognito, and see how the land there lay.

She might catch a glimpse of Lorrimer. She wouldn't make herself known to anyone, but she would rather like to confirm what Evanson had said with her own eyes.

Therefore, on the following morning, which was Sunday, Delight got up at, to her, an ungodly hour, and proceeded to Grand Central station, where she took a train for Connecticut.

At the Westmill station she asked how far the Lorrimer place was. On being told, she looked for a taxi, for she was not in form, and hadn't been for years, to walk several miles even under the ideal conditions formed by a sunny Spring day and a good road flanked with tall budding trees. She had the taxi set her down at some distance from the gates of Westwood house. She wanted, she said, to walk the rest of the way, the weather was so delightful.

The taxi driver meantime, grown loquacious, after the manner of his kind, had regaled her with stories of the Lorrimers; of Lorrimer's long illness and his recent miraculous recovery; of his regained interest in life.

"Why, he's even taken to flying again," said the driver, in awe. "I was talking to him down to the station just the other day I guess after all the burnt child don't dread the fire none. He's got an awfully pretty girl visiting him and his mother. I remember driving her to Westwood House the day she came here, last Fall."

Castles in the Air

After having made careful inquiries as to the extent of the Lorrimer place, Delight got out of the cab, paid the talkative driver, and proceeded, avoiding the gates, to walk along the main highway which skirted one side of the estate. The sun was warm, her high-heeled shoes not the most practical things in the world to wear on a protracted wandering and she stumbled along, uncomfortably, a little wearily, warm in her Winter coat, wishing savagely that she had been able to afford the smart spring suit she had seen in a Fifth Avenue window. Well, perhaps she could soon! But she had been afraid to spend what little was left over from her salary after the hotel bills and other necessities had been paid. She had to be careful unless, through this lucky chance, she found she no longer need be.

She began to think of little trotteur lapin coats, of tweeds and silks, of evening gowns, of a sable scarf like Mary Lou's, of quantities of the very elaborate underwear and very heavy perfume which she found desirable.

A high fence, or wall, ran around the Lorrimer place. It seemed to Delight that she walked miles on the other side. She was, she reflected somberly, pretty nearly always on the other side. What was it that Harry had said to her once—"Always on the outside, looking in, isn't that so, old girl?" Mustn't think of Harry now. To think of Harry would complicate things dreadfully. Put Harry out of her mind. Forget that he had ever existed. What unlucky fate had caused him to exist, now that this unexpected alteration in fortunes might be in store for her? Play her cards carefully and relegate Harry to the limbo of forgotten madnesses until the time came to dispose of him altogether

Presently, very tired, she came to a low door in the wall. It had been left open. She peered through, stooping in order to do so She saw trees and a path, and beyond that a perfect tangle of boxwood hedge which reminded her somehow of England, which she called and thought of as "home."

She went down the two shallow steps, under the little broken arch and through into the pretty path That corner of the place had, with so many others, been left to grow wild at its own sweet will, with merely the path kept cleared and the underbrush checked. The path wound and twisted through the trees, and Delight followed it idly, something young and untarnished in her responding unconsciously to the frail green shadows of the new leaves, to the unstartled birds, to the dappled sunlight and the bright blue sky.

She forgot, for a moment, almost everything, and was a child again in England.

Before she knew it she had come close to the boxwood hedge and heard voices.

One voice was Mary Lou's. It was quite clear, and Delight stopped, her heart beating fast, and listened. She stepped back and leaned against a tree. Mary Lou was laughing.

"Lorry, you're so silly!" said Mary Lou.

The hedge grew very high and thick, and had been clipped into entertaining formal patterns. It had also been trained into a sort of maze, and was wide, forming a semicircle at the point at which Delight viewed it. Apparently Mary Lou and Lorrimer were sitting there, just beyond her view.

"Well, it's a swell day to be silly," Lorrimer remarked, and Delight leaned forward, listening eagerly. The voice was strange to her and yet touched a chord in her memory. It was deeper than she recalled it but vibrant, as colored with overtones as the voice of the boy she had known, a voice which had stammered love to her, and protestation: "You're all my world, Delight. I'll love you always."

She smiled, a twisted little grimace, remembering.

"Suppose," said Lorrimer, "we ditch this family party and go out to the island this afternoon? I'll take you up for a hop—I want you to see the plane. We won't get ours for a matter of weeks, of course, but you'll get an idea. Perhaps you'd like to choose a color scheme," he inquired, seriously, "for the fittings and what not?"

"Oh, of course, lavender and green!" laughed Mary Lou. "Why not?"

"Sounds rather boudoir," he objected. "Come on, let's go this afternoon, Delight—"

The Eavesdropper

The listener shrank back against the rough bark of the great tree, hearing her name spoken to someone else. She felt like a ghost.

"And," continued Lorrimer, "let me take you up for a ride. You like flying. You'll trust yourself with me, won't you?" he asked.

"You know I would," said Mary Lou, simply.

"But not to me," Lorrimer told her. "Isn't that right?"

She was silent. Suddenly, as the woman who listened waited, her heart beating thickly, and as the sunlight fell in golden splashes on tree and hedge and path, Lorrimer spoke again.

"I'm always breaking promises," he said, "and I know it. But I'm human after all. Seeing you day after day, being with you constantly has only served to convince me how right that boy's love was, long ago, that love which has not altered, save to strengthen and deepen We knew each other briefly enough, Delight, I'll admit that. We have changed, both of us, you perhaps more than I, basically. But I must have known then the sort of girl you would become, the sort of girl who would return to me, the only girl in the world!"

Group Reading Aloud As A Cure for Stammering

This Method of Instruction in Fluent Speech Has Been Quite Effective, Says Dr. Copeland, Revealing a New Theory as to the Cause of This Impediment.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

STAMMERING is a common distressing affliction. It has been recognized for many centuries. Only within the past few decades has there been any success in the cure of this condition.

Dr. Copeland

In former times it was believed that stammering resulted from some disturbance in the development of the speech organs. It used to be thought, too, that it was caused by coldness of the tongue and that the condition could be removed by drinking wine in moderation because the wine produced heat!

About the middle of the nineteenth century a new theory was advanced. According to this, stammering was due to the fact that the movements of the tongue were retarded An operation was devised whereby the tongue could be elevated, in the hope and expectation of correcting the trouble This theory went into the overcrowded wast basket of discarded ideas

Although surgery has been proved to be of no direct worth in this condition it has its value in correcting associated defects. Such operations are never performed on the tongue, but are used to remove enlarged and diseased tonsils, adenoids, or to straighten and open a deformed nose.

It is now believed that stammering is the result of impediment in thought and that it is not primarily a disorder of the speech organs. This disability affects the speech only because speech follows thought. According to this theory there is an inability of the man who stammers to think the words clearly in his mind.

There are special schools for the training of stammerers Pupils are placed in classes and instructed in simple methods of fluent speech

Among such methods is group reading, which is done aloud and in unison Later the pupils read alone If, at any time, they should stammer the group immediately joins in and thus carries the stammerer over his difficult point Eventually these pupils find themselves reading alone and gradually they overcome the stammering

Tremendous strides have been made within the past decade in the study of stammering Old ideas have been placed on the shelf New ideas are constantly being tried. It is hoped that in time an effectual treatment for stammering will be established Then thousands and thousands of children will be relieved from suffering and humiliation

Those who love romance with a dash of adventure will undoubtedly be fascinate with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayers South Sea island picture, "Never The Twain Shall Meet," which opens at the Cliftona Theater.

Adopted from the story of Peter B. Kyne, the picture has a distinct tang of the islands. W. S. Van Dyke, the director who filmed "White Shadows in the South Seas" and "The Pagan" in Tahiti, has enhanced the color and native part due to his intimate knowledge of the ways of the Polynesians.

Conchita Montenegro, the little Spanish dancer recently brought to America, was almost created for the part of Tamea, the South Sea island siren who, by her exotic wiles and native charm, so blinds the scion of a wealthy American family that he gives up his home, people and business to follow her to her tropical island.

AT THE GRAND

Edmund Lowe is the screen's most versatile lover!

During his long and successful screen career, Eddie has played the masculine lead opposite such renowned beauties and screen favorites as:

Lily Damita, Constance Bennett, Dolores Del Rio, Marguerite Churchill, Colleen Moore, Lois Moran, Corinne Griffith, Billie Dove, Joan Bennett, Catherine Dale Owen, Dolores Castello, Mae Clarke, Sharon Lynn, Jeanette MacDonald, Leila Hyams and others, ad infinitum.

Lelia Haymas was the favored lady to receive Lowe's woolngs in "Part Time Wife," Fox movietone comedy drama of martital upset at the Grand Theater.

SINCLAIR TO QUIT TRACK

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 26.—There was considerable specudation here today whether the retirement from the turf of Harry F. Sinclair is temporary or permanent.

Quite a few of the regulars were of the opinion that when the 25 Sinclair horses in training are put on the block Sept. 3, it will mark the end of Rancocas stable competition.

C. J. Fitzgerald, who will cooperate in conducting the Rancocas sale next Thursday, made the announcement that Sinclair would not be represented in summer racing for the balance of the season.

The explanation given for the sale was Sinclair's business interests have been marking demands on his time that precluded him giving proper attention to his stable.

However, it is generall believed here that Sinclair's decision to dispose of 25 horses next week is resentment toward the turf authorities for their action in barring overnight Rancocas entries, following the poisoning of the filly Ladana recently.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Fred Clellen

Funeral services were held at the Albaugh Funeral parlor at 11 o'clock Friday morning, by Rev. McElfresh for Mrs. Fred Clellen, a native of Jackson-twp, who passed away at her home 1582 Dragoon ave, Detroit, Michigan, Wednesday, Aug. 19, 1931. Beautiful flowers, tributes of loving friends from far and near surrounded the casket which contained all that was mortal of one who was loved by all who knew her. Solumn and impressive survices were also held for her at her late home in Detroit on Thursday morning, amidst a throng of relatives and friends.

Margaret Annas known by all her friends as "Madge" was the daughter of Louis G., and Ida Caldwell Shipley. She was united in marraige to Frederick Clellen of Kinderhook December 25, 1905 and to this union four children were born Mrs. W. C. Twydell and Charles Clellen of Detroit and Frederick J., and James who died in infancy. Mrs. Clellen leaves to mourn their loss her husband, her son and daughter, her aged mother, one sister Mrs. Charles H. Parks of Mt. Sterling and one brother, Chas. E. Shipley of Chillicothe and a host of other relatives and friends who will sadly miss her.

In her girlhood days she united with the Methodist church and ever remained faithful thru her short life. Two weeks ago complications developed in her condition which became alarming and which resulted in her growing worse each day. with words of cheer and the familiar smile as her life ebbed away. She remained conscious almost to the last. Her life was a busy one crowded full of good works. Her's was a most unselfish nature and her greatest joy consisted in adding comfort to those about her and her smile and cherry voice radiated sunshine and scattered gloom.

The singing of Beulah Land by her brother-in-law Guy Clellen, which was rendered so impressively, was just one of her life's wishes She was laid to rest in the family lot in Forest Cemetery neath a bed of flowers, her friends tributes. The pallbearers, were James Clellen, Guy Clellen and C. E. Shipley of Chillicothe, Chas H. Parks of Mt. Sterling, Guy Boots of Hillards and Frank Bennett of Circleville.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this means of extending our sincere thanks to those who so kindly assisted us during our recent bereavement, the death of our dear wife and mother. To Rev. McElfresh for his efficient services to those who sang and to the many friends and organizations who sent flowers. Also to Mr. Clark for his kindness.

CALCAR PLANT

the large handicaps of other systems. A substantial amount of oxygen is put into the plant effluent, all disease germs are killed and the colloidal field is removed which eliminates decay and decomposition of the effluent, and, with this taking place, there is no putrefaction of the effluent. While the elimination of disease germs is not attempted or claimed for other systems, it would seem that this is quite a step forward in the Calcar process, especially where the stream below a disposal system is to be used for a city water supply.

During the test at Circleville, state men encountered a flow of dye waste every Saturday from the local broom factory. Here the process demonstrated one of its salient features, complete control and flexibility. To the smallest degree, in some cases, of any foreign substance, other than purely domestic sewage, entering a biological system, the entire plant might be thrown out of order for two or three days, but with the Calcar process, if something should enter the plant to disrupt its operation before the feeds of chemicals could be adjusted to take care of it, it would not last longer than the period of detention in the tank which would not be more than thirty minutes to two hours. Here also the sewage had a concentration of setteable solids of 12.2 c. c per litter where the average sewage over the United States runs about 2.4.

The plant construction is much less expensive than that employed in plants now in use. It consists primarily of a pumping and chemical feeding building and a special constructed setting tanks. No expensive secondary settling tanks, sludge disgestion tanks, sprinkling filters or activated sludge tanks are necessary in this process.

ELECTION COST

to at least 400 votes, as now provided by law, would save the state at least $150,000 yearly in cities of 15,000 or over.

Among the cities in which an increase in the size of precincts was urged were Hamilton, Lorain, Lima, Portsmouth, Steubenville, Mansfield, Marion, Elyria, East Liverpool, Ironton, Tiffin and Piqua. In only one of 33 Ohio cities mentioned as having too few voters per precinct, was the size of the precinct up to the quota advocated by the Ohio Institute.

ECONOMY NEEDED

"Clearly," the report added, "Ohio cities have not adopted as economical a precinct arrangement as experience has proven to be feasible." The application of the 400-vote standard would eliminate more than one-fifth of the precincts in cities of 15,000 or over, it was said.

With a query of "if Detroit, with a population of 1,569,000 can conduct its election system with 12 full-time employes, why does Cuyahoga-co with 1,203,000 need 31 such employes?" the report flayed the practice of hiring "too many" election employes It added that Hamilton-co with a population of 588,000 has 24 election workers, while Milwaukee has two, and Minneapolis four.

Setting up the practice followed in Columbus as an example, where 50 school buildings are used as polling places the report requested that other communities adopt the same plan to eliminate room rent and booth maintenance expenses from the election budget.

While some election boards have displayed "sound business sense, others have been lacking in regard to the use of public funds," it was charged in urging that more care be taken in making purchases In 1930, Franklin-co paid 15 cents per name for the printing of precinct registration lists, and in comparison, Summit-co paid but four cents per name.

Boards of elections, which have the option of opening the precinct booths for one day of registration or of handling the changes of registration at the central office and a few branch offices, should choose the former method, the report said.

The report also declared that the salaries of election employes should be reduced because they are higher than the wages paid other county officials, and in some counties "exceed those for county commissioners."

the large handicaps of other systems. A substantial amount of oxygen is put into the plant effluent, all disease germs are killed and the colloidal field is removed which eliminates decay and decomposition of the effluent, and, with this taking place, there is no putrefaction of the effluent. While the elimination of disease germs is not attempted or claimed for other systems, it would seem that this is quite a step forward in the Calcar process, especially where the stream below a disposal system is to be used for a city water supply.

During the test at Circleville, state men encountered a flow of dye waste every Saturday from the local broom factory. Here the process demonstrated one of its salient features, complete control and flexibility. To the smallest degree, in some cases, of any foreign substance, other than purely domestic sewage, entering a biological system, the entire plant might be thrown out of order for two or three days, but with the Calcar process, if something should enter the plant to disrupt its operation before the feeds of chemicals could be adjusted to take care of it, it would not last longer than the period of detention in the tank which would not be more than thirty minutes to two hours. Here also the sewage had a concentration of setteable solids of 12.2 c. o. per litter where the average sewage over the United States runs about 2.4.

The plant construction is much less expensive than that employed in plants now in use. It consists primarily of a pumping and chemical feeding building and a special constructed setting tanks. No expensive secondary settling tanks, sludge disgestion tanks, sprinkling filters or activated sludge tanks are necessary in this process.
